

Press Release

April 25, 2009

Genesis Security Systems Becomes Certified Partner for ONSSI, Hosts IP Video Seminar

Genesis Security Systems LLC is pleased to announce that it has become a certified partner for ONSSI and their IP digital video management systems. To become a certified partner, you must be factory-trained as well as have the technical and service infrastructure required to support their systems in the field.

In addition to becoming a dealer for ONSSI, Genesis recently hosted a seminar on migrating from analog to IP video platform. With more than fifty people in attendance, the seminar highlighted why IP video makes sense for future applications as well as how to make the transition with an approach that is both economical and uses common-sense.

According to Alan Kruglak at Genesis, "For the past five years, the trade journals have been pushing IP video while we thought that the market was not ready. About 12 months ago, with the combined advent of megapixel technology, more stable IP video management platforms, and H.264 compression, we recognized that the market is ready for these systems, and began ramping up our technical infrastructure. While the initial costs for IP video solutions are higher, the features and benefits provide a significant reason to make the transition. We support both ONSSI and VideoEdge IP solutions along with a host of IP cameras like Panasonic, Sony and IQNvision. We are certified partners for all of these products."

For more information on IP Video solutions or a copy of our presentation on migrating from analog to IP Video, please contact Chris Foster at 301-515-4400 or cfoster@gensecsystems.com.

2050

Security Solutions Supported By Responsive Customer-First Service